The women's magazine

Oyggjarnar

The first women's magazine in Faroese, Oyggjarnar (The Islands), was published from 1905 to 1908, edited by Súsanna Helena Patursson (1864-1916). It covered topics like women's education, suffrage, and interior design. Súsanna was a pioneer in Faroese publishing and the fight for gender equality. Read more on en.stamps.fo.

National archaeological discoveries

EUROPA 2025

Archaeological studies in the Faroe Islands show that the first Nordic settlement began in the 8th century, and by the 9th century, permanent settlements were established around the islands. The stamps depict a Viking-era chessboard and a brooch from a Viking burial. Read more on en.stamps.fo.

The Northern Gannet

With a wingspan of nearly two meters, the northern gannet is the largest breeding bird in the Faroe Islands. It breeds on the westernmost island, Mykines, nesting on cliff ledges and broad rock columns. The Faroese northern gannet population is estimated at 2,350 pairs.

Architecture

Eystur Municipality consists of 5 villages, and the new town hall has, in many ways, created a bridge and connection within the new Eystur Municipality. The building is positioned as a bridge over the Eiðisá river, with the roof forming a pathway across the river, creating a green belt between the public areas along both riverbanks. Read more at en.stamps.fo.

New leaflet

Due to rising production costs, we are unfortunately forced to discontinue the publication of the magazine in its current form. Going forward, we will instead send out a brochure like this one with short information about upcoming issues.

However, issue texts will still be produced for all stamp issues and will be available on our website en.stamps.fo. Additionally, all texts will be included in the yearbook, which is published every year.

50 Years of Faroese Stamps

The Faroe Islands issued their first stamps on 30 January 1975, featuring ancient maps and landscape art. To celebrate, a special minisheet was released on 24 February 2025, showcasing some iconic Faroese stamps, including the ram and the traditional dance ring, both engraved by master engraver Cz. Slania.

Posta Stamps will be attending the following exhibitions:
